Lucky Routines

According to some athletes, lucky routines help them perform better in competitions. In fact, they believe that they can't win a game without these routines.

Tennis player Serena Williams, for example, believes that she shouldn't change her socks during a tournament. She wears the same socks for all the games. Serena also believes she mustn't forget to bring her lucky shower sandals to each game.

Another athlete, basketball player Jason Terry has got a very unusual routine. The night before a game, he sleeps in the basketball shorts of his opponents! What else does Jason do for luck? He always eats some chicken before a game. He plays basketball very well, so maybe his routines really are lucky.

- Kind People Help Hurricane Victims

Generous Family Feeds Rescue Workers
Rescue workers and volunteers are working hard to save people from the floods. They are weak and hungry after hours of work and need food to continue. There aren't any restaurants or shops open, so Matthew Otero and his family are working day and night to make food and drinks for these people.

Texas Receives Clean Water
People in the disaster area haven't got clean drinking water. The Anheuser-Busch company in Georgia usually makes alcoholic drinks. But workers filled over 155,000 cans with water instead and sent them.

Peg
I'm buying Christmas decorations tomorrow. I like getting ready for Christmas early. Are you doing anything special this year?

Clive
Yes. I'm entering the annual Santa Run race in Newtown, Wales. All the participants wear Santa Claus costumes and they run about seven kilometres. People give money for the event and it all goes to charity. So we're going to help many people have a better Christmas this year.

Emma
We live in New York, but we're staying with our family in sunny Australia this Christmas. On Christmas Day, we're all going to the annual summer music festival at Bondi Beach. There will be many Santas at the beach, but they'll wear swimsuits, not Santa suits!

1. Peg / Clive / Emma isn't celebrating Christmas at home.

2. Peg / Clive / Emma is going to do a sports activity.

3. Peg / Clive / Emma is going shopping soon.
